several of these to go with your different outfits. Brands like Espirit, which cost upwards of Rs 3000, are well within reach by luxury standards. For those who can spend some extra, Swiss brand Tissot is a likely option. Guess costs upwards of Rs 7450.

Work. For everyday wear in business, you need a watch that helps to keep you punctual. A seconds hand, clear markers, world time, chronograph, day and date, and easy-to-set timer are some of the things to look for. As against the luxury watches, which are far beyond the reach of middle-class consumers, these watches are pretty affordable. Examples are Titan, Fast Track and Maxima. Fast Track, a Titan brand, targets children and teenagers.

The starting price for Titan is Rs 1295, Fast Track Rs 595 and Maxima Rs 350.

Health-monitoring. For the health-conscious, functions like heart and pulse rate monitor, running measurements (distance, energy consumption, average pace and number of steps), workout data and personal information input are important.

Classic. If you're looking for a watch that will keep excellent time and remain in style for years to come, go for one that is powered by light or the movement of your wrist. Because these watches are meant to be worn for decades, they are made in styles that will remain classic for the years to come.

Citizen offers Eco-Drive light-powered watches that run on a long-lasting rechargeable battery, and Seiko luxury timepieces for men have batteries that are charged with the movement of your own wrist.

Sports. If you are an athlete, look for a watch that can meet the demands of your active lifestyle. Shock- and water-resistance, stopwatch, timer function, altimeter, thermometer,
