Havells forays into LED lighting market

Havells India has entered the light-emitting diode (LED) market with the launch of an LED light called Endura Lite. Endura Lite is available in 3x1W and 1x3W versions with two colours—daylight white and warm white.

Havells claims Endura Lite consumes 50 per cent less energy than traditional sources and is four times more energy-efficient than regular incandescent lamps, because a larger part of the energy is converted into light than is lost as heat. There is no use of glass or filament in these lightings as compared to normal lightings, hence Endura Lite lasts long with average life of 50,000 hours.

Canon eyes Eastern India

Canon India has announced that the Eastern market has registered the highest growth in most of its product categories in the first five months of 2009 over the same period last year. The company claims to have become a leading player in East in the digital camera and digital copier multifunctional categories with 30 per cent market share in both.

East India, which includes cities like Kolkata, Bhubaneswar, Guwahati, Patna, Ranchi and others, generated a revenue of Rs 1.1 billion across all business in 2008. This is higher than the company's total growth plan of 25 per cent to reach the turnover of Rs 8.4 billion, establishing East as the growth engine for Canon. Canon is looking at revenues of Rs 1.5 billion in 2009 from East, which is a growth of over 30 per cent.
