"With employability of engineers/professionals becoming the most-desired requirement with both academia and industry, this attempt to recognise and encourage institutes which are adopting the latest technologies to reach this goal, is a good step forward."

—Gautam Awasthi, general manager-marketing, Electronic Measurement Group, Agilent Technologies India

"These awards are very relevant. And we should put more emphasis on encouraging those who have done good work. I hope EFY Group will work very hard to make these awards a benchmark of quality and excellence."

—Rayees Ahmad, director, Howell Protection Systems (I)

"The Tech@Edu Awards reflect relevance, excellence with ability to deliver, and endorse the quality of education of institutions. The winners reflected clear goals, unshakable confidence, proper planning, enthusiastic action and consistent persistence."

—Sandeep Arora, director, SPI Engineers

"Technology adoption is essential to impart education at lower cost without sacrifice of quality. Awards for this help meet this desirable end by motivating Institutions. The awards in due course will develop a prestige value and Institutions will like to advertise the receipt of awards to attract students."

—Anand Bhushan, MD, Bhushan & Bhushan

lab equipment and facilities, audio and video systems, IT Infrastructure, hi-tech teaching aids, e-learning solutions, utilisation of the Web and mobile, usage of open source, etc. Ninety institutions were shortlisted for the second round.

The EFY Group team then gathered detailed inputs from these shortlisted institutions on their technology practices and infrastructure. Based on this detailed survey, the EFY team selected 32 nominees, of which the names of ten winners/leaders in technology adoption were announced at the event. No rankings were awarded to winners or nominees.

Under a special category, Somerville School, Vasundhara Enclave, Delhi, bagged the 'Safe Campus of the Year' award for excellence in adoption of technology for security in schools. The award was sponsored by Howell—one of the key sponsors of the Tech@Edu initiative. ●
