Internet information services from Microsoft

Microsoft has come up with its latest media offering—Internet information services (IIS). It is an integrated platform that resides on a server and helps to deliver audio and video using the standard hypertext transfer protocol. It also has features like intelligent progressive downloads, smooth streaming, edge caching and advanced logging—all of which help cut bandwidth costs without compromising on user experience.

Windows 7 release by year-end

Microsoft has announced that the next version of its operating system, Windows 7, is expected to be available to customers towards the end of the year. In addition, Windows Server 2008 R2 Release Candidate (RC) is available now and the final product is expected to release in the same timeframe as Windows 7.

Both Windows Server 2008 R2 and Windows 7 include security, reliability and productivity enhancements and, when used together, deliver cost savings and productivity gains with features such as Direct Access and Branch Cache.

Direct Access feature delivered by Windows 7 with Windows Server 2008 R2 enables IT managers to provide the mobile users with reliable and secure access to the corporate network resources when the users are on the Internet, without having to initiate a VPN connection. It also allows servicing and update of remote PCs, even when they are on the road.

In addition, BranchCache delivered jointly by Windows 7 and Windows Server 2008 R2 enables IT professional to decrease time branch office users spend waiting to download files from remote servers by caching the previously accessed content locally in a branch's network.

Access healthcare on your phone

You can now avail healthcare services on call instantly. HealthcareMagic, a healthcare company, has tied up with Atom Technologies to provide IVR-based payment option for its services. Patients can now interact with doctors by dialing a landline number to obtain the medical assistance for their illness or a common query. The charges applicable for the same ranges between Rs 160 and Rs 999, which can be paid through mobile/landline using credit card in a secured and hassle-free manner.

Customers need to dial HealthcareMagic call centre number where they will be informed on various packages offered. Once the customer has decided on a package, he will be connected to Atom IVR to pay using a credit card over the phone. Once transaction is done, then customer is connected to a panel of doctors to get medical advice on his queries.

This option of paying over the phone for services will be available to the entire base of over 400 million telecom subscribers and over 40 million landline subscribers across operators in India.
