laptops and notebooks, plus a 3G pre-paid mobile broadband data package with national roaming facility from MTNL. It eliminates the need to use an additional USB modem (or dongle) to connect to the Web, and by having an embedded modem, customers can have an 'always-on' experience with greater stability and data speeds on the network.

EMC to invest $1.5 billion in India by 2014

EMC Corporation is going to invest an incremental $1.5 billion in India over the next five years (2010-14)—a three-fold increase to investments made by EMC in India over the previous five years. It has also set up a new LEED Gold green-certified facility that joins together R&D and EMC Global Services organisations from four separate locations across two cities into one campus to form a centralised centre of excellence (CoE) in India. This represents one of EMC's largest R&D centres outside the United States.

The incremental investment is focused on three key areas that will take EMC India to its next phase of growth: expanding R&D infrastructure at the India CoE; increasing EMC Global Services capabilities at the India CoE; and adding more technologists to drive deeper levels of engagement and support for local customers and partners.

Olive, Tata Teleservices launch 3G embedded network

Olive Telecommunication, the parent company of Haier Mobile, has launched India's first network embedded with high-speed Internet access (HSIA) for mobile Internet connectivity and broadband access.

The network X107H, powered by Qualcomm's QSC 6085 chipset, will leverage the capabilities of HSIA technology on Tata Teleservices' network to enable users with "anywhere, anytime" broadband connectivity and help them access advanced data applications and services on the move.

Microsoft India partners with TCS

Microsoft India and Tata Consultancy Services (TCS) have come together to launch Microsoft-TCS virtualisation centre of excellence (CoE) in Chennai. Designed to help customers experience the right approach to applying and managing virtualisation across IT architectural layers (namely, server, machine, application and desktop) in their business environments, the CoE will leverage best-of-breed Microsoft technologies (such as Windows Server 2008 Hyper-V and System Center Virtual Machine Manager 2008) to showcase virtualisation scenarios to customers. It is a joint initiative by the two companies to accelerate the adoption of virtualisation technology in India.

BSNL to buy Millicom's Sri Lanka operations

BSNL is planning to buy Luxembourg-based Millicom's Sri Lanka operations. The management committee of BSNL has already approved a proposal to submit a bid to acquire the company.

"We are looking at various opportunities to expand our operations in foreign markets," said Kuldeep Goyal,
