

Online Forum and Communities

Get help, and share your knowledge and ideas on these online forum and communities dedicated to electronics

edaboard.com

This website is a good forum if you want to learn electronics or need help in electronics related homework. It covers topics like EDA theory, EDA software, digital design and programming, analogue design, hardware and PCB design, and general computing. Currently, the forum has 264,735 threads, 1,133,743 posts and 471,503 members.

www.edaboard.com/forum.php

electronicsforu.com

This portal is a storehouse of information for the electronics and technology industry. Latest news, information about new products, and a Web search covering not less than 50,000 electronics websites are some of its highlights. The portal also has a section called 'Tech Discussions,' where you can ask questions and discuss the various technologies that you use or would like to use. You can network with others in your field and boost your knowledge.

<http://forum.electronicsforu.com/forum.php>

mathworks.com

MATLAB Central allows MATLAB, Simulink and other MathWorks product users to share expert techniques, features and information about the latest developments. It consists of five major sections: File Exchange, where people upload and download code; a question-and-answer area called MATLAB Answers; a discussion forum called Newsgroup; a place called Link Exchange to share bookmarks and weblinks; and a collection of blogs written by MathWorks employees.

<http://mathworks.com/matlabcentral>

allaboutcircuits.com

At this forum, thousands of students, hobbyists and professionals from around the world share their knowledge and ideas. When viewing the board as a guest, it gives you limited access to most discussions and other features. By joining this free community, you get access to post topics, communicate privately with other members, respond to polls, upload content and many other special features. Registration is fast, simple and absolutely free.

<http://forum.allaboutcircuits.com/forumdisplay.php?f=3>

electronicspoint.com

Electronics Point is a community of electronics experts and hobbyists. If you have some electronics related questions, this is the place to come to. Like most forums, it has a good FAQ section to clear your doubts. You need to register before posting anything on the forum. The forum categories include general electronics chat, electronic projects, microcontrollers and programming, circuit help, datasheets, schematics, manuals and parts, electronics repair and electronics homework help. It has 222,846 threads, 1,467,707 posts and 20,804 members.

www.electronicspoint.com/