Indus Towers and NDMC to set up digital networks in New Delhi

Indian telecom tower vendor, Indus Towers, has won a contract from New Delhi Municipal Corp. (NDMC) to set up digital networks in the form of street lamps across NDMC area. It will use street lamps to boost Wi-Fi coverage. This project leads the development towards chief minister's plans for a Wi-Fi-enabled Delhi.

The project covers 18,500 street light poles in the NDMC area. 3000 poles will be equipped with 2G, 3G and 4G, across a span of three years, with target of 1000 poles each year.

Indus Towers will assist NDMC in upgrading the poles with LED lights, CCTV cameras for video surveillance, Wi-Fi access points to cover all road lengths and optical fibre networks to backhaul telecom traffic.
