

large units with investments above $100 million, a special package of incentives and concessions would be considered.

The state government proposes to support innovation and R&D in chip designing and product development with an initial funding of Rs 100 million. A school under International Institute of Information Technology (IIIT) and a research lab would be set up at a cost of Rs 150 million.

LG bullish on touchscreen

After Samsung's announcement of its high-octane touchscreen in India, LG has joined in to explore the hottest growing touchscreen segment. It plans to treble its sales in the country by revamping its product line-up, marketing and distribution.

"We will launch 40 new models this year and treble our marketing spends to Rs 3 billion," said Sudhin Mathur, head, mobile division, LG India.

Havells enters new lighting business

Havells India is foraying into the new-generation ceramic metal-halide (CMH) business. Its CMH plant will manufacture one million units annually and is claimed to be the first in the world to manufacture CMH lamps. The company plans to export 90 per cent of its production.

CMH lamps are considered to be the highest-efficiency light sources in the industry and are rated best in the CRI Class with improved lumen maintenance, which gives more than 80 per cent even after 6000 burning hours.

E-bike maker plans charging stations across India

To boost e-bikes sales in India, Ahmedabad-based Electrotherm India Ltd (EIL), a manufacturer of electric scooters Yobykes, will set up a network of battery-charging stations throughout India. Starting with Ahmedabad, the company will collaborate with local garages to install battery charging stations at a radius of around three kilometres of major cities. Delhi, Mumbai,
