

phones a reality for millions of MTNL mobile subscribers in the metro cities of Delhi and Mumbai. To offer the service, Aksh leverages Alcatel-Lucent's cost-effective, flexible mobile streaming server.

Also, Samsung has released two TV phones in India—Corby TV and Metro TV. So you can now watch your favourite TV channels on the move, wherever you go.

TV makers launching Net-savvy models

LG, Samsung and Sony are launching Internet-capable TV sets to differentiate their top-end high-definition models from bevy of flat-panel sets flooding the Indian market. The new models will offer video on demand, access to websites such as YouTube and podcasts in tieups with websites and local content providers.

The Net TV range of LG will have about 14 models, while Sony has already launched TVs with Internet content in India. Samsung will provide Internet capability across its LCD, LED and 3-D TV platforms.

Panasonic to manufacture in India

Japanese major Panasonic is developing a state-of-the-art manufacturing unit along with R&D facility in Haryana, with an investment of about $250 million. Around half of the company's $75-billion global revenue comes from the Indian market and it is aiming to achieve sales of up to Rs 50 billion by 2012 from here.

Panasonic already has five manufacturing plants in India. But in Haryana, it plans to set up a Panasonic technopark on a larger scale. It will bring multiple operations there and also localise R&D activities.

Godrej forays into LED displays

Godrej has launched the Eon range of LED television sets and aims to capture 5 per cent of the total market share in LED televisions. The company will launch the TV in some parts of Ma-
