

USEFUL WEBSITES

SOLAR ENERGY

Here are a few websites that can enlighten you on how to harness solar power as a renewal energy source

Compiled by NIRAJ SAHAY

thesolarplanner.com

If you are looking for information on how to select and install a home photovoltaic system, this is the place to start.

Whether you are a student, home owner, contractor or installer, tutorials available on the site will walk you through the entire process.

www.thesolarplanner.com/index.html

solarpaneltalk.com

The website is a forum for discussion on different topics related to solar energy. It has discussions on solar lighting, solar panels and solar heaters. The forum has approximately 18,803 topics with 176,406 posts and 28,624 members.

www.solarpaneltalk.com/

freesunpower.com

This website provides tutorials on setting up a solar power system for producing electricity from sunlight. These cover solar panels, charge controllers, power inverters, storage batteries, AC generators, wires and cables, meters and monitors, and much more. Complete system wiring diagram examples plus interactive online design tools are also featured with a point-and-click interface. The site works as the place to learn and have fun with solar power.

www.freesunpower.com/index.php

off-grid.info

The website aims to be a great collection of useful information for people wanting to explore ideas related to the concept of off-grid living. Solar energy plays a major role in building an off-grid system. You can use the navigation section on the right of the home page to find categories you are most interested in. Be sure to check out the blog, which now has 200-plus off-grid discoveries and tutorials from around the Web.

<http://off-grid.info/blog/how-to-solar-power-your-home-amazing-tutorial/>

builditsolar.com

The website has plans, tools and information to help you build different solar projects. It has hundreds of projects ranging from lighting an electric bulb to building a solar home. It also has design information and tools for building renewable energy projects. The website offers a monthly newsletter that can be subscribed to by anyone to stay updated on such projects.

www.builditsolar.com/