

The smartball has been rigorously tested to ensure it stands up to all match and training conditions your kick so you can learn to control, strike and manipulate the ball like a pro. Compatible with iOS and Android, you can simply connect the smartball to your Android or iOS device for instant feedback on power, spin, strike and trajectory, along with tips and guidance to help you develop supreme on-pitch skills.

Fitness tracker for your car

TomTom unveiled its CURFER device, which is basically a fitness tracker for your car. It gives you

CURFER app lets you share your badges and driving statistics with family and friends information such as cornering G-force, acceleration, cornering, braking and idling in real time, with colours from red to green showing how you are performing, and a lot more. The accompanying CURFER app instantly shows you where your car is, on a map. It displays your current position too, so you can get back to it, easily.

There were numerous other cool products that were launched and showcased at the event, like a smartfridge with Wi-Fi-connected tablet built into one of the doors, window-cleaning robot vacuum, 3D printing pen, full-body scanner, a whole suite of laptops and tons of wearables (for you and your pets) from the likes of Samsung, Garmin and Fossil. There was even a Pokemon Go iPhone case from Catalyst, which has rubber tramlines to line up your Poke Ball shots. EFY
