

Five Tablets For On-The-Move Executives

Lugging your bulky laptop around can add to the stress of an important client meeting. But with a tablet in your hand, you have all the productivity enhancing support you need to make your point emphatically. Take a closer look at the tablets making inroads into the Indian market in the last few months

■ ONKAR SHARMA

It's time to break free from your heavy laptop, which is probably responsible for a sore shoulder—earned from lugging it to innumerable visits to a client. In its place, there are light tablets waiting to be embraced for their ultra-modern touchscreens and funky looks. Tablets, also known as slates, promise you almost everything that a laptop does on your official visit or business trip. These let you send e-mails, browse the Internet, access your business applications remotely, watch videos, listen to music, prepare presentations and edit documents, among other functions. In addition, tablets are extremely lightweight. They are much larger than smartphones, thereby allowing you enough of screen-space to browse through applications. Above all, what makes them attractive is their affordable price and the seemingly endless online application support for various day-to-day business and personal tasks.

India has, of late, witnessed a flood of different cost-effective and feature-rich tablets. And as opposed to the iPad from Apple, there are a few that even allow you to make and receive calls.

Binatone Home Surf Touch

If a low price tag matters, you will love the Binatone Home Surf Touch tablet which tops the list because it is the lowest priced. This product from Binatone, a UK-based telecom company, is almost as slim as the iPad, runs the Android 1.6 operating system and has a 20.3cm (8-inch) touch-screen. It allows you to access the Web via Wi-Fi and includes 2GB onboard storage. The tablet comes bundled with 128 MB of RAM and is powered by an ARM 11 667MHz processor. It allows you to conduct all your basic computing tasks on the move.

Price:

₹ 9000

